Hybrid tea were first created by crossing robust, vigorous hybrid perpetuals with the more tender, long-flowering tea roses. The result was the modern hybrid tea rose, which have large flowers that are held alone on straight stems. The flowers have a 'pointed' appearance. Most are fragrant and they're available in all colours except blue. Repeat-flowering and an open growth habit. Ideal for cut flowers.

Floribunda (Latin for "many-flowering") roses were originally produced by crossing Hybrid Teas with Polyantha Roses. They are prized for creating a mass of colour by bearing many flowers held in large clusters, over a long season. Floribundas usually have little scent and are ideal for growing in large bed and mixed borders; they are generally hardy, more robust and more disease resistant than Hybrid Tea.

Climbing roses — There is often confusion between Climbing and Rambling Roses. The short answer is very simple. Most Rambling Roses only flower once. Most Climbing Roses flower right through the summer. However, there are exceptions.

Shrub roses are the product of crossing various species roses with modern bush roses during the 20th century. They are a group of modern types including varieties that don't fall under any other classifications. Shrub roses have an open and spreading shape, often with arching prickly branches that flower along their length. Flowers are single, semi-double or fully double in a huge number of colours.
